Password Protecting Posts

There are situations where you write a post but only want specific readers to read that post. For example, the post might contain student work or photos that you only want to share with the family, students or other teachers.

One option is to password protect the post; any user that has the password can view the protected post.

NOTE: If you want to make the entire blog to be private, only visible to specific readers, see blog privacy options.

How To Password Protect a Post

1. Click on Edit in the Visibility area of the Publish module

2. Select the Password Protected option, enter your password and click OK

3. Once post is written just click Publish and the post is now password protected.
